Virginia Bartos, the National Register Analyst at the New York State Historic Preservation Office in Albany, and members of the Village of Brockport Historic Preservation Board will be present to provide information and answer questions.

Village of Brockport

Progress on the State & National Nomination – Virginia Bartos of the NYS Historic Preservation Office described the proposed historic residential district and the implications for the owners of property in it. She explained that there were no disadvantages to listing on the State and National Registers of Historic Places and no restrictions placed by that listing on the control of the property owners. A potential benefit is eligibility for tax credits under state and federal legislation. Bartos responded to a few questions from the audience. In response to one questions, she explained that listing on the registers is not the same as creation of an overlay district.
